

Interior Designer – Austin, Texas

Interior Designers at O'Connell Robertson have a passion for designing Healthcare and Education environments, finding the Mission for each client. Whether the project is small or large a candidate will thrive on creating solutions that make these spaces better for the people who occupy them.

We are looking for candidates in the Austin area with the following experience and skills:

- 5-7 years related interior design experience, with a strong background in Healthcare (education a strong plus as well)
- Collaborate on healthcare and education projects, including programming client needs, conceptual design, and the design and construction phase
- Strong knowledge of the design process: specifications, color, materials, and FF&E
- Ability to work through fast paced projects from concept to complete construction documents
- Strong leadership, communication and relationship management skills
- Outstanding graphic presentation skills using Revit and Adobe Suite
- NCIDQ Certification for Interior Design

O'Connell Robertson is an integrated Architecture / Engineering firm with over 68 years of history in central Texas. We believe every project has a mission, and we understand that each educational, medical and athletic facility we design has a purpose that extends beyond form and function. That's why we never stop innovating and exploring solutions that result in better outcomes for everyone.

We provide a corporate work environment that is team structured, and place a high value on individual professional development. In addition to a comprehensive benefit package and competitive salary, the right candidate can expect to join a work environment that is as much about community as productivity.
